New Pool Customers Praise Facility, Revenues Now Exceed Expectations

by James Giese

"The whole facility is running fantastically, now," responded Aquatics Supervisor George Rogala when asked how the new indoor pool facility was doing after the first three months of operation.

"I love it, it's great," replied Sara Pray of Southway, when asked the same question. She and her sister Jessica and friends were enjoying an afternoon off from classes at St. Hugh's by swimming at the pool.

"Terrific," summed it up for Terry Mangum, a resident of Greenbriar and part-time cashier. As a handicapped individual who must use a wheelchair, Mangum considers swimming to be an important form of exercise. "I was thinking that I should move to Florida so that I could swim year around, but now I can stay in Greenbelt the rest of my life." Mangum likes his job there as well, because he gets to see many of his friends and his mother's friends. "It's a neighborly type of job."

Dee Downs of Ridge Road, who swims at the pool regularly along with husband Jack, described the new pool as "our winter vacation resort." She has enrolled in the arthritic aquatics program held three afternoons a week. Jack Downs noted that the Greenbelt volkmarchers were planning a Volk-triathlon (walking, bicycling and swimming) for later this spring, a unique event made possible by the new facility.

Two Miles a Day

Dea Zugby of Ridge Road, observed reading the morning newspaper in the hydrotherapy pool (spa), thinks that the best thing about the pool is its convenient location. As a user who swims two miles daily, this is important to her. Also, her daughter Kristina, is a regular user and a member of the swim team. Her regret is that she can't get her husband, Bob, more interested in swimming. He has been to the pool only once.

"Wonderful," was Barbara McGee Simon's response. "My entire family uses the pool." A resident of Ridge Road, McGee brings her kids to the pool after school and her mother to it once a week for senior exercise. She

by James Giese

Fiscal reports prepared by the Greenbelt Finance Department under the supervision of Deputy City Manager/City Treasurer Michael P. McLaughlin and Accountant Jeffrey Williams for both the fiscal year that ended June 30 (FY 1991) and for the first six months of the current fiscal year indicate that the city is in good financial health. This result has been accomplished in spite of revenue shortfalls and cutbacks in state financial aid.

In a joint statement, signed by City Manager Daniel G. Hobbs and McLaughlin and included in the Comprehensive Annual Financial Report, the two note that while growth is still occurring, it is at a much slower pace than anticipated. Consequently, the approved budget for FY 1991 proved to be "overly optimistic in its revenue estimates."

The two go on to report that, "Early reports on the assessed value of real property indicated that receipts would be 5.58% lower than budgeted." Because of the early warning, operating departments were able to reduce expenditures by 6.3% to compensate for revenues reduced by the same percentage. As a result, the city completed the year better off by $7,169 than what was originally budgeted for the General Fund, the principal operating fund of the city. However, expenditures did exceed revenues by $172,131 because the adopted budget had estimated city income to be $179,300 less than expenses and used surplus funds to balance the budget.

New Growth and Accomplishments

Two retail commercial facilities also opened—a Seven-Eleven Store on Hanover Parkway and the Sports Authority in a building addition at the Beltway Plaza. Further, it was announced that the new Federal Courthouse for the Southern Maryland District would be built adjacent to and annexed by Greenbelt.

Accomplishments of the city during the fiscal year included continued construction of the Aquatic and Fitness Center, which was opened in September; completion of the reconstruction of Centerway; and the undertaking of the second Greenbelt Lake water quality project, the construction of an enlarged forebay (sediment basin) on the southern side of Greenbelt Lake. Also, the North End School

A Greenbelt Profile

Meet Dorothy Lauber, A Dedicated City Clerk

by Sandra Barnes

Dorothy Lauber is a small woman, neat and trim. She sits in her comfortable office on the second floor of the city's Municipal Building. The crimson volumes of codes for the State of Maryland line her bookshelves, lending an air of dignity to her surroundings. Every weekday morning around 6 a.m. she meets two or three other women to walk around Greenbelt Lake. Her self-discipline is reflected in both her appearance and her attitude to her work. Lauber fervently cares about her job just as she cares about the city of Greenbelt. She epitomizes what is known as a "dedicated city employee."

Recently appointed city clerk by City Manager Daniel Hobbs, she has worked for the city since 1975. She was the former city manager, James K. Giese's secretary. Lauber succeeded Gudrun Mills, who retired at the same time as Giese last June.

Experienced

The city clerk's job is not new to Lauber. She often filled in for Mills when Mills was sick or on vacation. On several occasions she attended the week-long city clerk's workshop at Old Dominion University. She enjoyed meeting the other city clerks and learning about their problems. She became a certified city clerk in 1986.

Still, when Mills retired, Lauber wasn't sure she really wanted the job. When she filled in for Mills, her workload seemed immense. But, just as she was thinking she wouldn't apply, she realized that the city clerk's job seemed like a lot of work because she was really doing two jobs at once—her secretarial job for Giese and Mill's job. "When I realized that I would only be doing one job, I decided I wanted to be the city clerk," she laughed.

Meetings and Elections

The main part of a city clerk's job in Greenbelt is the recording of the minutes at city council meetings, public hearings, and special meetings. The days following the meetings, she prepares the minutes. See MEET, page 16

Letters to the Editor

Risks Confusion

To the Editor:

The article on the GHI Board meeting in the News Review (January 23) risks confusion about subleasing. That's mainly because the Board itself is confused. Contrary to a Board member's quoted comment, we do rent. In fact, the January 23 issue has an ad for three GHI homes for rent. The ad was correctly placed by GHI for members who had to leave the area temporarily and were granted permission to sublease.

That's the idea of subleasing. No one wants to turn GHI into a rental community. But you can't stop all subleasing and the Board hasn't. Of five recent requests, two were granted and three were not. All dealt with subleasing unsold homes.

Of the three rejected, none had chosen a person who was willing to rent with option to buy. But then again, neither did one that was approved. This shows there is confusion on the Board's part as well. It also argues for writing the option-to-buy requirement into the policy. The Board has approved subleasing criteria and updated them periodically, most recently on October 24, 1991.

The increase in requests for subleasing unsold homes, spurred by the faltering economy, caused the Board to consider adding a criteria requiring members to find a person who would rent with option to buy. I believe this provision is the best compromise between refusing all subleasing requests for unsold homes and granting all requests without regard for the number of renters added. The Board decided instead to review each request to sublease unsold homes.

Also, please remember that none of these requests dealt with the traditional reason to grant subleasing: members who need to leave but want to come back. I've seen such members gain approval quickly and sent on their way with smiles all around.

Dewey Love The Library?

To the Editor:

I can understand Mr. Mahar's concerns expressed in his letter in the January 23 News Review, and I even agree with some of them. But they should be properly documented, which I did by visiting the local library.

The recession (330.9) does not smell as bad in the library (077.4752). Those of us who are unemployed (330) absolutely require the services of the library to improve our status, especially after benefits run out.

Not only is it an obscenity (811.54) to, as Mr. Mahar says, "run a library full tilt seven days a week with reckless disregard for costs, the belief that Sunday is the Lord's Day or the demands of severe budget cutbacks," it is also against the First Amendment of the Constitution (342.73) to prefer one religion over another. Those of us (286.7) who recognize Saturday (263) as the Lord's Day

(296) have to pay taxes to support people working on a day we do not work on, and are at least grateful for the short time that the library was open on Sunday, our day off.

The library is not operated without regard to costs (026.3) and budgets (027.4). If you want to check this, the annual financial report of the Prince Georges County Memorial Library System is available at the library.

I don't blame Mr. Mahar for being angry with illegal U-turns by Library patrons. The Maryland Vehicle Administration laws on this are available at the library, in the Maryland pamphlet file. Illegal U-turns should only be done by drug dealers (362) avoiding the Drug Free School Zone (362.293) next door. After all, library patrons are usually defined as people that can read those signs (372.19). I make an effort to drive around Westway to avoid passing Mr. Mahar's house and inconveniencing him. I will leave it to Mr. Mahar to apologize (230) for my actions to the residents of Westway. Perhaps Mr. Mahar and Mr. Cassels and I could use the resources in the Tugwell Room of the library to redesign (388.12) Crescent and put in a full cloverleaf to the library parking lot. This might remove dangerous traffic conditions (388.413).

Then again, perhaps Mr. Mahar would like to live simply where the libraries are closed 7 days a week. There are a few places where foreign missionaries and communist propagandists have not yet reached (796), where the local dialect has a minimum of words (422). According to research I have been doing at the Greenbelt library, there is a direct correlation between life span, social conditions and economic opportunities with the size of a language's vocabulary. For those that want to escape the horrors of civilization, such as a long lifespan (618.97) and economic (338.04) and cultural opportunities (323), these areas can be found in economic atlases in the library.

All of this information is available at the library, when it is open.

Helicopters!

To the Editor:

Help! Does anyone know how to get the frequent flights of big, noisy, olive-drab helicopters redirected? They pass regularly over our house on weekdays from 8:30 a.m. to 11:30 p.m. at tree-top level. Their vibrations rattle china and windows, and interrupt sleep and conversation inside the house, even with closed doors and windows.

Can these vibrations cause structural damage to houses? They are similar to a low-grade earthquake. Of course, the quality of outdoor enjoyment is degraded.

Any suggestions regarding how to get these helicopters to fly over highways rather than residential areas would be welcome. Whose helicopters are they? Suppose one fell down? Isn't there a noise pollution law?

Grandma Osborne; An Appreciation

(The following story was written several years ago for a classroom assignment.)

by Teresa Downs

Last April, I moved away from home and got an apartment of my own. Within a week I had made friends with four of the women who were living here. We spent many summer evenings out on the porch sipping lemonade and discussing the day's events.

The eldest of our little circle was Grandma Osborne, whom I've grown very close to. There are many things which I have gained from her through our friendship that I don't think I could have gained from someone my own age.

Because she has lived almost 65 years longer than I have, she is made up of many, many more experiences. Growing up in poverty, raising her children through the depression, and having to use an outhouse are a few. She has grown with change after change of society and has dealt with many different people in a wide variety of situations. Because her experience has given her a tremendous understanding of the patterns of human behavior, there is little that surprises her. It can be accounted to her age and experience that she has so very much to offer.

Becoming friends with Grandma Osborne has brought to light many of the difficulties and beauties of old age. I have great admiration for her because there is little her experience hasn't taught her. She is a person who never puts others below her and never puts people down for their behavior. Her generosity has no limitations; she asks only that you appreciate her concern. If you're down, she'll make you laugh. If you're hungry, she'll feed you; and if you're not hungry, she'll still feed you!

Going downstairs and visiting Mrs. Osborne in her tiny, sparsely furnished apartment has made me appreciate the things I have. I've learned not to take my beat up VW for granted, seeing her confined to a radius of 50 yards or less around her apartment. Even if my car breaks down I have my health and can run or ride my bike to any number of destinations.

As a child it was impossible for me to ever conceive of what it must be like to be lonely. Her only real source of comfort was summer evenings on the porch, an occasional visit from friends or family and herself. Because of her I have learned not to take for granted the companionship of friends and family.

I believe the most valuable thing I've gained from Grandma Osborne is a genuine friend. Her scolding words have brought me peace of mind many times and for this I am most grateful. Through her witty sense of humor, sparkling personality and wealth of experience she has taught me to find contentment in my own life.

Lena M. Osborne

Lena M. Osborne died on January 22. She would have been 91 the following day.

Mrs. Osborne was born and raised in Waterbury, Connecticut. She came to the Washington area in 1939 when her husband William J. was employed at the U.S. Navy Yard. Together they raised a family. In 1956 they returned to Connecticut for several years, but then moved back here to Riverdale first and then to Greenbelt in 1970. Her husband died in 1976. She was a member of St. Hugh's Parish.

Mrs. Osborne is survived by her sons William F. (Sonny) of Greenbelt and Robert Boisvert and daughter Mildred Cady; two sisters, Eva Boisvert and Florence Desmarais; 10 grandchildren; 22 great-grandchildren; and nine great-great-grandchildren.

A Mass of Christian Burial was offered at St. Hugh's with interment at the Baltimore National Cemetery.

Spotlight On the Arts

by Sandy Smith

Konrad Herling is the producer of the Arts Center's old-fashioned variety show, "An Evening with Friends," to be held Saturday, Feb. 22 at Springhill Lake's Fountain Lodge. The Arts Center first sponsored a variety show of local performers last year. The program was both popular and a critical success. Greenbelters expressed their appreciation and interest in seeing talented performers entertain in their own community.

This year's show features some of last year's headliners. Al Herling, Greenbelt's foremost pianist returns and adds a comedy routine. Konrad Herling will play popular songs from the romantic to the stirring. Helen Oring and Lucille Lushine will play and sing Broadway favorites. Kate Brett and Kevin Enoch bring authentic string music, a precursor of bluegrass. Adept at acoustic guitar, banjo and fiddle, they will play traditional favorites of this indigenous American music style. Completing the musical program will be Doug Love, playing the zither.

Storyteller Bill Mayhew will entertain with humorous and moving stories. Lori Moran has a stand-up comedy routine. She has performed on cruise ships, at community gatherings and for special audiences.

Final performers are being added to the show. Check the News Review for more details. Greenbelters who need transportation to the nearby show location at Springhill Lake Fountain Lodge should call 441-8770.

A Preview

As part of the music program of the Greenbelt Arts Center, Konrad Herling gave an informal concert at Green Ridge House on February 1 for 40 residents. He presented a variety of classical and popular favorites, including "George," an original composition. In his concert he previewed some of the selections from his performance at the upcoming "Evening with Friends." After the concert residents held a reception with a Valentine's theme.

Pool Is "Terrific"

particularly likes being able to come during the day while her children are in school to enjoy a leisurely 15 minute swim and dip in the spa.

Gerald Conway of Lakeside Drive is another regular user along with his wife, Joan. With the opening of the pool, they dropped their membership in a health spa. "This will be much better once the exercise facility is built," he observed. He further noted that because there isn't another facility like this nearby, nonresidents were also taking advantage of it.

"I feel good about the general reception of the people who use the facility," commented City Manager Daniel Hobbs. "At present, pool revenues are ahead of estimates and there has been a steady increase in pool use." He noted that the city had hosted meetings of the Prince Georges Municipal Association and the Prince Georges Municip-residential area. Most of the passes sold are to individuals rather than to families.

Pool attendance amounted to about 6,800 in October, dropped to 6,200 in November, returned to over 6,800 in December and jumped to over 8,500 in January. Now that there is regular programming in the facility, city officials expect attendance to rise even more from the current average of 276 a day.

"I've been with the city for 18 years," Rogala noted. "There are a lot of residents out there that I've seen throughout the years who never came to the outdoor pool, but they are coming here. I've never seen them down at the recreation center, but they're coming here. And that's nice to see—that those people are utilizing this facility when they probably never used another recreation facility."

In the first four months, 57% of the pool users were residents while 65% of the passes were however, that pool fees must be competitive with those charged by other public pools if the city is to keep its customers.

Hobbs would not speculate on whether next year's pool fees would be increased, noting that that would be a decision made by the council as part of its budget review process.

Heating Problems

The first months of operation have not been without problems, however. Rogala advises that the problems relate to water temperatures, facility temperatures and building construction problems.

Of greatest customer concern has been that of water temperature. In December, the city received a petition signed by 27 users asking that the water temperature be raised by "just two degrees." Rogala advises that the city intends to maintain water temperature at 82 degrees. While some seniors find that temperature to be on the chilly side, lap swimmers complain that it is too warm. Rogala notes that at 82 degrees the body starts to dissipate heat. "In other words, you begin to perspire." He regrets that it is not possible to satisfy everyone with the temperature. Some have suggested raising the temperature for senior activities, but, "It's just not that easy to do," he responds.

The pool has a complicated mechanical system, Irving explains. "It is a sophisticated and state of the art control system with all three mechanical components — heating, ventilating and air conditioning interrelated." The ventilating system includes dehumidification and the removal of heat from the air being circulated. That heat is used to supplement the gas heating system used to heat the pool water. There is a separate heat system for the spa which is kept at 102 degrees. The air in the pool room is kept two degrees warmer than the pool water, according to Irving.

Who Threw the Switch?

The pool temperature did drop to 78 degrees over the Christmas holidays, Rogala admits. "We had a contractor come down from Pennsylvania and he had to work on the pool pack units. One of the reasons the system was down is that somebody climbed the fence out back and threw one of the circuit breaker panel switches. The whole system seemed like it was running because there are six breaker panels outside for each unit. It seemed like it was running well, but it wasn't." Now there are locks on all the panels, he advises.

Changing Ladies Chilly

Another recurring customer complaint has been that it is too cool in the women's locker room. That room is farthest from the heating system. Rogala advises that the problem is being worked on by city maintenance personnel and the building contractor. He believes that it is a matter of properly balancing the heating system.

Building Construction Problems

Although construction was substantially complete when the building was opened, the contractor is still correcting deficiencies noted at that time or subsequently. This has caused some temporary interruptions in the operation of the facility.

Two major problems are not totally resolved. CPVC piping was installed instead of the pipe specified for carrying water to and from the filters. City staff is concerned that the pipes used will not hold up with the use of heated pool water. The prob-

Twins Fred and Donald Murray celebrate their birthday at the deep end of the pool with their dad, while 15 of their friends romped in the shallow end of the pool at a party hosted by their parents, Fred and Cindy Murray. lem has been studied by specialists employed by the city and the contractor. The solution proposed is to replace some of the pipe nearest to the heating and filtration units, but to leave the rest in.

This work will not be done until next summer. "By holding off to summer we'll see nearly a full year as to how it holds up. A number of people will be able to look at it further," Rogala explains. Also, by doing it in the summer when the outdoor pool is open, the impact of the new pool being closed will be minimized.

Not Enough Showers?

Apparently as the result of misunderstandings between the architect and the Health Department, the facility has an insufficient number of showers to meet the Health Department standards for summertime use. An additional shower is required in each of the locker rooms. It was believed that the two showers located elsewhere in the building satisfied this requirement.

The solution proposed by the city is to install two outdoor showers for use by the patrons of the outdoor pool. Rogala believes these showers will have added benefits, because people who have lain on the ground outdoors or who have spilled food on themselves from the pool concession will be able to clean off without going back inside.

Status of Exercise Facility

"I want to emphasize," Irving states, "that the facility is not a whole, yet. The biggest question asked is when will the fitness center be opened. That is a very integral part of the operation. Some people have withheld purchase until it opens."

"We hope to have the fitness center opened by late November, 1992," City Manager Hobbs advises. Due to the expenditure of most bond funds and the loss of anticipated state open space grant funds, the city has little money remaining for this project, which is to reconstruct the

by James Giese

One of the more difficult, but interesting, problems confronting the new staff at the Greenbelt Aquatics Center is the thong bathing suit. For those not in the know, thong suits are very skimpy in front, but almost non-existent in the back. Some pool users wear thongs—both male and female. Not all the thong wearers are young, either. Some of the other pool users are offended by them.

Whether or not to permit the wearing of these outfits raises constitutional issues beyond the ken of the aquatics staff. What is the community standard for obscenity?

Reportedly, the issue was first raised as a result of complaints about a young female swimmer. The predominantly male pool management staff looked at the problem very carefully and decided that it was OK to wear a thong.

Next, complaints were received about a male swimmer. The initial management reaction was that it was not acceptable for men to wear thongs. However, it was quickly pointed out by female staffers who were not offended by the men that such a dual standard would constitute sexual discrimination.

"Most things that have occurred at the pool since it first opened were anticipated, including some of its problems. However, one thing we didn't anticipate was people showing up in thongs," Recreation Director Hank Irving reported. The current city policy, according to Irving is that users are not encouraged to wear thongs, but they are not prohibited unless they are so minimal as to offend other pool users. It is the responsibility of the on-duty pool manager to determine whether or not an outfit is appropriate.

original pool bath house so that it will look much the same as it originally did from the outside, but have space for the installation of a variety of exercise machines. The fitness center is to be directly connected to the new pool facility.

An important step towards building the fitness center was taken in January when the city council authorized spending additional money for its redesign in order to reduce construction costs and make the facility affordable for the city.

pal Administrators and received numerous favorable comments.

A Shot in the Arm

Recreation Director Hank Irving was delighted with the response to the first offering of classes. "The winter class program registrations brought in $10,000—a good shot in the arm for pool revenues." Registrants began lining up at 6 a.m. and many of the classes were filled the first day.

"What makes the pool so great is its appealing atmosphere resulting from the translucent roof, color scheme, waterfall and the general open feeling of the design," he reported. "And the staff—they're doing a fantastic job."

Pool Use and Revenues

Through January, residents had purchased 337 annual passes and 167 nine-month passes, while non-residents had purchased 129 annual and 146 nine-month passes. The nine-month passes are preferred by those who have a summer pool facility in their sold to residents. However, 55% of the one-day admissions purchased at the pool were by non-residents. While the pool is primarily for the use of residents, Rogala does not believe the population of the city is sufficient to generate enough users to pay for operating costs and that use by non-residents is important if the pool is to become self-sustaining. Non-residents are charged higher fees.

Hobbs notes that this year's operating budget for the pool has a deficit gap between revenues and expenditures of $150,000, which amounts to about a three cent property tax levy. Over time, city officials hope to close that gap. He advised that there has been a cost recovery user study undertaken by his staff of all city services that compares true cost to what the city charges. The City Council will review this information and determine what are fair fees to charge for city services, including use of the pool. He notes,

Needy Offered Help With Heating Bills

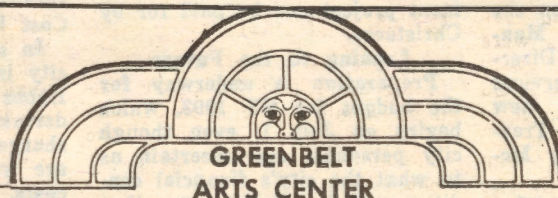

With the economy in recession and rising unemployment, it will be more difficult for many families to keep warm this winter. With that in mind, local oil heat dealers are offering financial assistance to needy area residents in an effort to keep them warm.

Those eligible for heating assistance include: elderly or disabled individuals who live on small incomes; individuals who receive public assistance, supplemental social security income or food stamps; underemployed or unemployed individuals and individuals who receive certain veteran's benefits.

The Maryland Energy Assistance Program (MEAP) is administered by the Maryland Department of Human Resources. For additional information, or for questions of eligibility call 1-800-352-1446.

Snakes Alive!

Can venomous snakes be identified, or how does the venom work? Find out the answers to these questions and many more at this special program held on Saturday, February 8 from 1-2 p.m. and 3-4 p.m. at the Watkins Park Nature Center. A local snake enthusiast who specializes in these venomous reptiles will bring living examples to the program. The program is open to the public, however, reservations are required. CITY BUDGET property was transferred back to Prince Georges County Board of Education for the construction of a new elementary school to replace Center School. The fiscal year also saw the collection of recyclables at curb side (door to door in GHI) by Prince Georges County for all detached homes and townhouses.

Cautious and Watchful for "Hits"

Commenting in an interview on the current state of the city's finances, Hobbs described Greenbelt as "positioned well financially." However, both he and McLaughlin indicated that they were "cautious" and "watching carefully what was going on."

The monthly financial report for December indicates the city currently is in good financial shape.

Hobbs noted that the city had been "hit" like all the other governments this fiscal year as a result of cutbacks in state grant programs made after the fiscal year began. "Our hit is about two cents on the tax rate, or almost $100,000." The city has had both its grants for police protection and for Greenbelt CARES cut by 25% during the fiscal year. Hobbs and McLaughlin are fearful of further cuts taking place to offset the state's revised estimates of revenue shortfalls.

"Right now we're holding our head above water," Hobbs states. He is not sure, however, what the city will do if it takes any more hits from the state.

Cost Containment Program

One precautionary measure that Hobbs has implemented is to set aside savings when expenditures are less than budgeted for an item and withholding authorization for spending these funds unless an essential need occurs. "So far we have put away about $190,000," he advises. The set-asides result from savings in insurance costs by switching carriers and from not filling a number of authorized vacant positions such as occurred when the positions of Assistant City Manager and City Treasurer/Director of Administrative Services were combined into the new Deputy City Manager/City Treasurer position now held by McLaughlin.

Six Month Financial Report

The monthly financial report for December 1991, the halfway mark for the present fiscal year, also indicates that the city currently is in a good financial condition. By the end of December the city had collected 75% of its revenues for the year. While the city customarily realizes more of its revenues in the first half of the year, the report indicates that collection of the city's two most significant revenue sources—real and personal property taxes—are doing very well, with almost 100% of the more than $5 million real property taxes having been collected and 90% of the $1.3 million personal property taxes being collected.

Two major revenue sources which remain uncertain as to their final amounts are the city's share of the state income tax and the city's levy of the admissions and amusement tax. This year, the city did not increase its estimate of revenue from the income tax over last year's budget. Since last fiscal year's revenues only fell short by $10,000 of the $1,010,000 budgeted, city staff is optimistic that the city will receive at least as much revenue this year even though a statewide decline in the amount of income taxes paid is expected. However the city never receives a final accounting of its income tax revenues from the state until after the end of the fiscal year.

The admissions and amusement tax primarily reflects the sale of tickets at the local movie theaters. These sales vary widely from quarter to quarter and are dependent upon the quality of movies being shown at the local theaters as well as the general trends of people going to the movies. For the first quarter of the year, the only revenues tallied so far, the city received 29% of its total budget. However, revenues for this summer time quarter tend to be higher than average.

Expenditures in First Six Months

A little more than half of the budget has been spent in the first six months. However, Hobbs contends that the city is actually under budget by two to three percent. He notes that the budget reflects a number of large one time expenditures for debt service, payment to the retirement funds and transfer of budgeted contributions to the city's Capital Projects Fund and Replacement Fund.

One budget that appears to be well out of whack is the Legal Counsel Budget, which primarily accounts for the fees paid to city attorneys. During the first six months of FY 1992, the city has spent nearly all the funds budgeted for the year. Hobbs attributes this excess expense to a number of unforeseen expenses, plus his need as a new person in his job to frequently seek the advice of the city's legal counsel.

"I'd rather incur legal expenses at the front end than have to expend it picking up the pieces," Hobbs commented. McLaughlin also noted that one major legal expense relating to the financing of a special assessment for the Roosevelt Center commercial buildings owned by George Christacos will become an expense of the special assessment project and be paid for by Christacos.

Looking to the Future

Preparation is underway for the budget for FY 1993, which begins on July 1, even though city personnel are uncertain as to what the city's financial condition will be. Hobbs notes that the state legislature is dealing with a $1.2 million gap between state revenues and proposed expenditures. He considers any state grants for Greenbelt to be at risk as well as other state aid which is provided on the basis of distribution formulas approved by the legislature. While there are proposals being considered to increase the county's authority to levy a piggy-back income tax, it does not appear at this time that Greenbelt or other municipalities would benefit.

In the meantime, Hobbs has requested the city departments to prepare budgets 2% below this year's, while continuing to maintain current service levels. In addition, he has asked department heads to submit alternative proposals to reduce their budgets by another 5%, along with explanations as to what the effect of these cuts will be. These recommendations are to be those that "minimize the impact on city

Greens Elect Officers, Plan for Coming Year

by Bob Snyder and Doug Love

On Monday, January 27 the Greenbelt Greens approved their bylaws, elected officers, and filled key committee posts to prepare for an active year of community involvement.

After reviewing an adaptation of the bylaws of the Auburn, Ga. Greens, a structure for activity was approved by consensus of the 10 participating members.

The series of monthly public meetings and the quarterly business meetings will be chaired by Coordinators Nancy Hey and Doug Love. Bob Snyder and Hopi Auerbach, were elected secretary and treasurer, respectively. National Liaison Bob Auerbach will continue to report on national and regional Green activities, and liaisons with local groups such as the Greenbelt Recycling Committee, College Park Bicycle Coalition and the League of Women Voters will report on activities that Greens are interested in helping with.

Plans are being made for participation in Arbor Day, Earth Day and Labor Day celebrations. Monthly meetings will feature talks on Adopt A Stream, space exploration, Native American relations, a poetry reading, and other subjects. The bylaws state that notice of all meetings will be made in the Greenbelt News Review, and by telephone for members living outside of Greenbelt.

The Greens have reserved the library meeting room for Monday nights. However, current plans call for the Library to be closed on Mondays from now on. Appeals have been made to the Library Board for a change in plans, and to the City Council to allow the Greens to meet in the Council Chambers on Monday nights.

Any solution to this problem will be reported to the News Review so that members and the public will know where to attend subsequent Greens meetings.

"Oh, John, I never knew you felt this way until I saw your love note in the News Review." "Mary, I've wanted to tell you but I was too shy." "It pays to advertise."

Cost Recovery/User Fee Project

In another effort to keep the city in good financial condition, Hobbs has had a staff study undertaken to analyze user fees charged and whether or not they are sufficient to pay for the costs. He notes that it is up to the city council to set user fees, but that it is important for the members to know how much it costs to provide the services for which fees are being charged.

When asked if he would propose any tax increase, Hobbs indicated that the budget process had just begun and that it was too early to speculate on matters such as that.

In a memorandum to department heads on the budget, Hobbs states: "The Mayor and Council, of course, will make all the final decisions regarding the level of municipal services and the allocation of the limited resources. However, it is my responsibility to put on the table for their consideration a sound business plan to guide this public corporation for the next year. . . . I look forward to working with you and successfully meeting our upcoming budget challenge."

ERHS Senior Selected To Attend Symposium

Paul Rice, a senior at Eleanor Roosevelt High School, was selected as a Symposium Scholar by the Maryland Department of Education to represent Maryland at a national symposium on biomedical research in San Antonio, Texas, held February 2-4.

Rice joined 50 other outstanding science students—one from each state plus the District of Columbia—as active observers at the scientific summit co-sponsored by the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services and the Southwest Foundation for Biomedical Research.

Rice's parents and science teacher, Barbara Frandsen, also traveled to San Antonio for the symposium.

The criteria for choosing Symposium Scholars were scientific aptitude and scholastic achievement. Once selected, each student was allowed to invite the teacher who most influenced his or her interest in scientific research.

The symposium offers the students an opportunity to attend key scientific sessions and meet many of the nation's most distinguished scientists, including several Nobel laureates.

WSSC Forms Board To Hear Bill Appeals

The Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission has created an Interim Customer Dispute Resolving Board to adjudicate appealed water and sewer bills.

Sitting on the board, which will be chaired by a non-voting Commissioner, will be three customers who have been selected from the Customer Advisory Board (CAB). The CAB, a group of 20 rate-paying customers who represent civic associations and organizations from throughout the Sanitary District, advises the WSSC on policies and procedures from the customer's point-of-view, and has been in place since 1989.

Appeal hearings must be made in writing and disputed cases will only be heard after the customer has thoroughly explored all the internal options offered by the WSSC. A decision reached by the three member Customer Appeals Board will be the final decision of the WSSC.

Composters Sought

The Prince Georges County Office of Recycling is looking for volunteers with knowledge of composting and the ability to communicate effectively, to give presentations, and teach people how to compost in their backyards. Volunteers will also keep records of composting activities, coordinate volunteers, help answer questions from the public, and help with the newsletter.

For details on the position call the Prince Georges Voluntary Action Center at 779-9444.

GHI Board to Honor Schwan; Hears Multiple Dog Complaint

by Leslie Robinson

The Greenbelt Homes Board of Directors at its January 23 regular meeting planned to honor the late Charles F. Schwan this year by giving a scholarship in his name.

Schwan Memorial The board proposed to its ad hoc committee to honor former GHI president and city councilman Charles Schwan, that this year's scholarship award in the contest sponsored by the National Cooperative Bank be named the Charles F. Schwan Memorial Award. The award is equivalent to one-year's tuition at the University of Maryland or about $1,350. The scholarship is for a local student competing in the Judy Murphy Scholarship Award competition sponsored by the bank. The judges in the contest will be local author and treasurer of the News Review, Virginia Beauchamp, board members John Taylor and Margaret Hogensen, and an unnamed member of the Eleanor Roosevelt High School faculty. Donald Comis, the board member in charge of this scholarship, says the judging award will be made in February, but the big ceremony will be in May.

Five Dogs

A member came to this meeting and asked the board about GHI policy on the number of dogs a member was allowed to keep in a GHI home. The member said that a neighbor, who had moved to Europe temporarily, left two dogs in care of friends who were staying in the unit. The friends apparently brought along three more dogs. When questioned about how large the dogs were, the member said that there were four large dogs and one small one.

Board member Donald Comis told the member that GHI has no regulation limiting the number of dogs allowed. He advised the member to contact GHI management to look into the matter.

Problems with pets have come up before as indicated by two full pages in the Members' Handbook devoted solely to "Pets." This rule appears on page 17—"It is strongly suggested that members not have more than a maximum total of two dogs." The procedures for enforcement start out mildly enough with a letter of warn-

Other

The board approved preliminary plans for a two-story addition on the end of a two-bedroom frame unit. This addition will have a bedroom and bath on the ground floor. It will add 640 square feet of living space to the existing 792 square feet. The front of the addition will be set back from the front of the building and the addition will be given the same exterior treatment as the rest of the building.

Eileen Peterson of the Friends of the Greenbelt Library, urged the board to send a letter to the Prince Georges library board protesting the reduction of hours at the Greenbelt Library. The board agreed to do this.

Musical Whodunit At Petrucci's

by S. R. Cherry

Petrucci's Dinner Theatre, located on Laurel's Main Street, is presenting "Something's Afoot" through March 8. The musical is a spoof of Agatha Christie's murder mystery "Ten Little Indians."

The setting is 1935 on the island estate of an English aristocrat, who is killed promptly upon the arrival of his guests. The audience is invited to try to solve the mystery from the ever diminishing selection of suspects.

The talented 10-member cast is led by Desiree Kosiorek as the pontifical Miss Tweed. Kosiorek, a veteran actress in the Baltimore/Washington area offers a strong performance as the matronly snoop as she rallies the female guests in the song "Carry On," which can be best described as a suffragette chorus line.

Murray R. Hunt, who plays Nigel the wickedly sleazy nephew of the deceased, gives a humorous and animated performance whose only limitation is the size of the stage itself.

Although the characters effectively provide banter and musical numbers to move the story along, two performances offer an essential boost of energy as events become more predictable.

The first is that of B. Keith Miller. Miller plays Geoffrey, a college oarsman who gets lost in the area and is unwarily plunged into the murderous course of events. His spontaneity, voice and ease of movement offers a credible performance in his third appearance on Petrucci's Main Stage.

The second is the duet of Jane C. Boyle, who plays the maid, and Paul F. Gebhardt, the caretaker, in the tongue in cheek musical number "Dinghy." The pair project a chemistry that is light and unforced through this physical number. Boyle has a singing talent that teamed with the comedic timing of Gebhardt sends chuckles throughout the audience.

In all the musical provides an enjoyable evening in a relaxed atmosphere.

The friendly and professional serving staff, many of whom are understudies for the cast, are eager to make the evening a unique dining experience. Petrucci's dining provides elegant surroundings for intimate dining but also has a balcony area for private parties and groups. The Italian dinner is served buffet style.

Meet Dorothy Lauber . . .

Following the city council meeting, she prepares the minutes for distribution. She also is responsible for preparing the packet of information that precedes each council meeting. As city clerk, Lauber is in charge of the city elections and responds to citizen queries on a variety of issues.

The city election in November was the first Lauber handled as city clerk. With universal registration, the job is much easier than it used to be, she asserts. She no longer has to keep a separate registration of city voters. Now, every city resident registered to vote in the county is automatically registered in the city. Approximately 7,300 voters were eligible to vote this past November.

"I was getting a little nervous before I met with the clerks and judges," Dorothy admitted. But after realizing how experienced everyone was, she decided she was in good hands "so I wasn't so nervous."

Special Projects

Lauber enjoys the responsibility of knowing what she has to do and accomplishing it at her own pace. She is calm and methodical. Often, as Giese's secretary, she originated letters and reports. "Mr. Giese let you assume responsibility if you wanted it," she noted.

As a Greenbelt resident as well as city employee, Lauber was delighted at her involvement in the city's 50th anniversary committee, serving as liaison between the committee and the city. Her love of Greenbelt history led her to volunteer to record the oral histories of numerous Greenbelt pioneers, including many former residents who returned for the anniversary celebration. These histories were published in a special commemorative book of recollections, one of the souvenirs of the anniversary.

Moving In

Dorothy and her husband Bob moved to Greenbelt in 1962. Bob came to the Washington area first. A fellow worker encouraged him to look at homes in Greenbelt. He found a house in the 4 court of Crescent Road and sent for Dorothy, who waited in Oklahoma. "My relatives cracked up over living in a row house," she smiles. "But it was nice to come into a real community." She has followed the traditional role of a city volunteer — the Greenbelt Nursery School, the News Review and the Greenbelt Labor Day Festival.

Their two children, Alexa and Cole, were born in Greenbelt. Alexa works for Greenbelt's Recreation Department. She and her family live on Gardenway. Lauber delights in her babysitting duties for 2-year-old grandson, Kelly.

Cole, a student at the University of Maryland, served as a judge in the last election. His mother reports that he felt it was a good experience and gave him a good sense of grass roots politics.

Lauber enjoys working with people from Greenbelt and working for municipal government. "I like working for the city," she exclaims, "and seeing the results of your efforts." What is her goal in her new job? "I just want to be a really good city clerk," she declares. Knowing Dorothy, she undoubtedly will be.

1099 G Forms Mailed

The Maryland Income Tax Division mailed more than 858,000 1099G information forms to taxpayers who itemized deductions last year and received a refund from the state of Maryland. "We're required by federal law to send the Form 1099G to remind these taxpayers that the state income tax refund they received last year must be reported as income on the 1991 federal tax return," State Comptroller Louis L. Goldstein said. But the comptroller reminded taxpayers that they need not attach the 1099G to their federal or state income tax forms.

This year, for the first time, Form 1099G will include information indicating if any or all of the refund was applied to estimated taxes, or as a donation to the Chesapeake Bay and Endangered Species Trust Fund, or to a host of other offsets and credits.

Although a taxpayer may not physically have received a refund check, if the refund was applied to some other purpose, federal law says they did receive the benefit of a refund.

Taxpayers who still have questions after they check their records should call the refund section at (410) 974-3701, the income tax division's toll-free number, 1-800-MD-TAXES or any local income tax office.

All 18 Maryland income tax offices provide free taxpayer assistance between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m., Monday through Friday. The offices will also offer extra hours of free assistance on Saturday, February 1, and Saturday, February 8 from 9 a.m. until 1 p.m.

GHI Is Sponsoring Blood Drive Feb. 24

The Red Cross is currently experiencing a critical blood shortage in the Washington/Baltimore area. Blood types O and B are desperately needed, but all donations will be gladly accepted. Greenbelt Homes, Inc. is sponsoring a Red Cross blood drive on Monday, February 24 from 3 to 7 p.m. in the GHI Board Room on Hamilton Place. Please call 474-4161 for an appointment to donate.

Type O blood donors are critical in emergency situations because Type O blood can be given to any patient. If there is no time to determine a patient's blood type, Type O is used. Forty-five out of 100 hospital patients will need Type O blood. That is why the Red Cross needs Type O donors to give frequently.

There is also a higher number of Type B individuals among African Americans. One-quarter of African Americans have Type B blood, compared to only 12 percent of Caucasians. In addition, African Americans suffering from sickle cell anemia and other acute or chronic illnesses can need frequent blood transfusions. These patients need blood closely matched for certain factors which can only be found within their own racial group.

complete your Maryland income tax return free of charge, if you like. Just be sure to bring along a completed copy of your federal return and all W-2 statements," Goldstein said.

The Wind Ensemble was named the outstanding Catholic High School Band in the country. Quartet Provides Valentine's Music

The Takacs Quartet provides elegant music for Valentine's Day when they perform Schubert's "Rosamunde" Quartet, along with other works, at the University of Maryland Center of Adult Education, on Friday, February 14, at 8 p.m. The Center's intimate Garden Restaurant opens for dinner at 5 p.m.

Called "the most compelling string quartet active today" by the London Daily Telegraph, the Takacs Quartet rocketed to stardom in the last decade, earning an exclusive London Records recording contract, establishing a yearly series at London's prestigious Wigmore Hall, and receiving a long-term loan of the priceless, seventeenth-century Amati strings from Washington's Corcoran Gallery of Art.
